There was talk at stock exchanges and banks in Rome, Milan id Turin that the government may devalue the lira by at least percent soon—maybe tomorrow—as a means of overcoming the intry's rapidly worsening financial and foreign trade position.

At the same time, newspapers and politicians speculated that the government, the nation's 36th since the fall of Fascism, may collapse under the mounting eco-

The figure, indicating the difference between money flowing out to pay for goods and services bought abroad and the earnings from what Italy sells to other nations, is unprecedented for this country. Furthermore, Italy has the largest foreign debt among all major industrial nations.

Guido Carli, head of the Bank of Italy, disclosed that Italy has borrowed $10.5 billion abroad during the last two years and that it now has to pay $700 million a year in interest alone. He made it plain that Italy's credit is all but exhausted.

Gold Holdings

Mr. Carli pointed out that the central bank is holding more than 2,500 tons of gold. Its value at the official rate, nearly $3.5 billion, would jump to more than $16 billion at present gold prices on the free market, a reserve that might tide Italy over its present

Italy has suggested to other Western nations and to the International Monetary Fund that it be authorized to revalue a part of its gold holdings. The prob-lem will be discussed when central bank chiefs meet in Washington next week.

The European Economic Community also is considering how it might help. However, West German and other Common Market officials are known to be highly critical of Italian economic and social policies, which, they assert, have contributed to the present emergency. Mr. Carli, in a recent review of the economic situation, said the crisis was to a great extent, but by no means exclusively, caused by the enormously increased cost of crude oil. The bank governor's statement also criticized government inefficiency, public

Split Shows In Military In Portugal

By Richard Eder

LISBON, June 7 (NYT),-A week of political barnstorming around the country by provisional President Autonio de Spinola has strengthened the impression that the military structure underpinning the regime is undergoing some considerable strains. Gen. Spinola, other senior officers and some of the younger olficers who took part in the coup share a concern that Portugal's new freedom is getting out of hand and that Communists and other extreme leftist groups are making too much headway.

On the other hand, a number of leading members of the Military Movement, the name given to the group of 300 or so young officers who carried out the coup, are worried that Gen. Spinola, a man of conservative views, is building up his own power and that of the regular military hierarchy in such a way as to put an end to their own influence.

There are reports that Movement officers have held one or more large meetings in the last few days to discuss the situation. Two officers who are in touch with Movement leaders confirmed this today.

Too Presidential?

One of the officers described the subject of discussion as "the concern that Spinola is behaving like a president instead of like a provisional president."

During the first weeks after the coup, despite intense activity, Gen. Spinola remained out of the public eye. But in the last week he has visited four cities, conferring with the local military commanders and addressing enormous crowds.

Yesterday, for example, in the city of Evora, he repeated the theme of other speeches: that the army would not permit the freedom won in the April 25 coup to be exploited by extremists or by ambitions political groups.

"We respect all political groups, we respect all true politicians as a source of opinions of discussions, but not as a source of pressure upon our people," he said. "We overthrew a dictatorship, we will not consent to the imposition of new dictatorships."

Although Gen. Spinola named two Communist party leaders to the cabinet and although the party has played a major part in helping the government damp down labor agitation, the general is reportedly concerned by the organizing energy shown by the party and by extreme leftists.

Speech to Council

Perhaps his most significant speech, and the one that has most worried the young officers, was delivered Saturday when he swore in the Council of State. The council, which has quasilegislative functions in the provisional government, includes seven officers representing the Military Movement.

The Movement regards itself as the guardian of the coup. Its members say that it must remain leh in my heart that I perjured myself." Kleindienst said. He pleaded guilty on May 16 to a misdemeanor charge of refusing to answer questions put to him by members of the Senate Judiciary Committee in March and April. 1972.

Kleindienst did, in fact, answer the questions involved in his indictment. However, subsequent events indicated he had failed to tell the truth.

The logic of the charge drawn by special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski was that, because Kleindienst had failed to answer "accurately." he had not answered the questions.

Mr. Jaworski's move, which he discussed with former special prosecutor Archibald Cox, has brought him considerable criticism and ignited a major internal explosion on the special prosecutor's staff. Three lawyers working on the ITT investigation quit.

Judge Hart said Kleindienst "ould have brought "great credit" on himself had he answered questions accurately but that such action might have brought "discredit on another individual."

Speaking to reporters later, Kleindieust said he was "verv humbled and very flattered" at Judge Hart's remarks.

He said he had done his duty gay."

Pressed on why he had not told the schators the truth about the telephone call from President Nixon ordering him to drop the appeal of the ITT anti-trust case, "The direct question was never put to me.

A Response

On March 8, 1972, in response to a question from a Senate Judiciary Committee member, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Kicindienst stated: "In the discharge of my responsibilities as the acting attorney general in these [TTT] cases. I was not interfered with by anybody at the White House. I was not importuned. I was not pressured. I was not directed." Kleindienst acknowledged when he entered the guilty plea that "I was less than candid" with the committee 'because I viewed the President's order as ill-conceived, quickly retracted, in my opinion privileged and, in any event, not the focus of the committee's inquiry."

But, he said, "I was wrong...

and I sincerely regret it."

In previous hearings, the judge has said that he might have to dismiss charges against the de-fendants if the White House does not turn over the material But today he said, "Dismissal, that the President's actions seem to be pointing toward, is a course I should not follow until I have exhausted every other possibility."

As today's session began, Mr. Ehrlichman's attorneys told the judge that the White House had refused to turn over all of the subpoensed files and notes. Judge Gesell then demanded to know whether Mr. St. Clair would produce the material as ordered.

"I do not produce, the President does," the attorner shot back. 'I have no authority to go beyond what the President di-

Dr. Yazagi was addressing a group of foreign and Syrian newsmen who visited the hospital on a government trip to interview some of the Syrian POWs who returned yesterday and entered hospitals for treatment and further examination.

"One hundred and twenty out of the total of 382 POWs repatriated yesterday will need further treatment and operations to correct the negligence of Israeli Most Israeli ec-prisoners who were intermeded separately at their homes told a similar story of mistreatment at the beginning their eight-month internment in a Damascus jail, then an improvement of conditions when the interrogations ended.

"I wouldn't say that we were tertured." Gideon Arnhalt told a newsman shortly after returning to his home in Haifa, "I was able to stand up to the physical puaishment" the I-raeli airman said. "Maybe they tortured other prisoners, I don't know." Israel also claimed at least 42 Israelis were killed eiter their capting. Sima and its soldiers were tortured in Israeli prisons, but Israel defind the claims and said the Arae prisoners were treated better than regimed by international law.

David Vacuum an Israeli who was captured after holding out in a bunker for a week on Mount Hermon, said the POWs were gren only a haif loaf of bread and some polytoes dad during their first weeks of imprisonment. The Israeli said the Strians kept ies hands tied and his head colored for 10 straight days.

But the most striking changes in the agency have come at the top, having been initiated by Mr. Colby himself.

He replaced the 10-man Board of National Estimates and its staff of 30 last October with a system manned by what he calls national intelligence officers. The board formerly produced long-range estimates of the intentions and capabilities of antagonists. The 11 new national intelligence officers are expected to range through the entire government and beyond to put together their evaluations.

The group is preparing more short-term assessments and fewer long-range estimates. This is partly in response to the demands of their chief consumer, Mr. Kissinger.

the change was necessary, even though regrettable, an official explained:

"The board couldn't have gone on. It was in a helluva rut. It thought in big strategic terms and didn't get into grubby options. It was often too general philosophical. Also, its and profound skepticism on Vietnam didn't help the board in this

Dissenting Views The new estimates carry dissenting views from within the intelligence community as an integral part of their texts. In the old system, dissents were registered as footnotes. Mr. Kissinger was described by an agency official as wanting "papers dealing with real, live problems this week or next week."

The official said there was a lack of elegance and orderliness in the hastily written estimates of today, and a lack of "the rigorous review that 10 or 12 sophisticated and judicious minds could put tegether." But he Nixon's idea of construction maintained that Mr. Colby's peace," an official said.

In the year since he has taken charge, he has let it be known that he wants the agency to concentrate on new priorities such es international trade, cultural relations and the monitoring of international agreements to reduce arms and armies.

To this end the agency continues to maintain agents in American companies engaged in foreign trade and in journalism, with perhaps 500 of 6,000 agents using the cover of businessman

For example, Mr. Greenspan warned that savings and loans and mutual savings banks, which funance much of the nation's housing, may face severe probiems. With short-term interest rates running at 9 percent to 9 1 2 percent, they are barely able to retain deposits, he said. Such institutions, which are limited by law in the interest rates they may pay, would be threatened with "massive withdrawals amounting to tens of bil-lions of dollars" if short-term rates moved close to 15 percent, Mr. Greenspan said.

In general, the economists blamed the government for at least part of the initation. They said government borrowing and government - guaranteed borrowing to pay for social programs were dominating the long-term capital markets, which provide the benchmark for other credit markets. But the real roots of inflation, Mr. Sommers said, lay in a "pro-found historical shift in the social conditions and value systems of democratic capitalism.

"Modern economic systems in the free world are living in an explosion of expectations that carry the demands for output far beyond their finite resources," he "The failure of our political system to contain the growth of social demands within limits tolerable to the free market is the essential first cause of inflation in this society," he added.

As for solutions to inflation, the economists offered some proposals which they said could modify the consequences of inflation and perhaps "buy time." Among these were suggestions for more restrictive monetary and federal budgetary policies. There also was some sentiment in favor wage and price guidelines, although not for rigid controls. A real solution can only be found in a change of attitudes, Mr. Sommers asserted.

"Because we have placed the ultimate causes of inflation in a political and social tide, it is in political and social attitudes that we must hope for the ultimate adjustments," he said.

Israel Starts Evacuation of

Golan Areas TEL AVIV, June 7 (UPI).— Israel today began a 19-day evacuation by stages of Syrian territory occupied since the October war. Military sources said that UN forces have begun demarcation of the buffer zone on the Golan Heights. The official armed forces radio, in a report from the now quiet-battlefront, said the first transfer of land to UN troops would occur late tomorrow. The area lies in the southeastern sector of the forward enclave captured in October, the radio said, and extends in an arc from Deir al-Makher northward to Tel Shams.

The army sources said Syrian civil authorities and villagers would move back into the evacuated area two hours after the UN took formal possession. The entire disengagement process is due to be completed by June 26. according to the terms of the Israel-Syria agreement signed in Genera last week.

At Kuneitra, the rubble-strewn Syrian town that will lie within the buffer zone, a Canadian logistics unit installed itself in a camp due to house the headquarters of the 1,250-man UN force. Rabin Sees Steps Toward Egypt to End Belligerency

JERUSALEM June 7 (AP).-Premier Yitzhak Rabin said today that Israel would strive for a nonbelligerency pact with Egypt as the next step to a Middle East

Israel's new leader, in his first interview since he took office Monday, said that Israel would launch "initiatives" for peace with Egypt. "We will not sit and wait," he told a television interviewer.

Mr. Rabin did not say what initiatives he had in mind but he stated: "First of all, I think that after a period of time we will have to seek a way to take another step with Egypt toward peace." Mr. Rabin said "It would be very desirable to reach a stage whereby the belligerency will be terminated..."

The 52-year-old premier said the next step to peace would have to be with Egypt "because Egypt is the main country in the Middle East. Without it, no war has been started against Israel, and without it no war against Israel has

Mr. Soares's statement clarified the ambiguous declaration issued in Lusaka last night, which said merely that a cease-fire was con-ditional on a "global political agreement."

Mr. Soares said that he had wanted to discuss a cease-file with Frelimo leader Samora Machel immediately 'because the government's main concern is the war. Frelimo's point of view is that a cease-fire is only one aspect of the problem; they want an overall agreement based on the major political principles [of independence] before negotiating

The bill has passed the House but is being held up in the Senate principally because of a dispute over giving most-favorednation status to Russia. Unless it is approved the United States cannot take part in the

Most U.S. Oil Companies Tap Big Profits to Raise Salaries NEW YORK, June 7 (AP) .- lactor. It said the books would

Most of the nation's major oil companies are using some of their record profits to raise employee salaries, according to a survey taken by the Associated Press. One company, for example, is giving workers a bonus of a month's salary.

The survey shows that Exxon, Mobil, Standard of California, Continental, Standard of Indiana. Shell, Atlantic Richfield and Union are raising the salaries of nonunion U.S. employees. Some are offering pay increases to union employees as well.

Most of the increases by these oil companies were 6 percent raises. Mobil was the only company to give a one-time bonus of one month's pay, which meant really $900 in each to many workers.

Most of the companies would not say immediately how much the pay increases would cost. Union oil workers currently earn about $11,500 a year, according to the Oil. Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, The Mobil bonu... presuming the average employee makes $11.500 a year, would come to about $32 million.

Rawleigh Warner jr., chairman of Mobil, said that the bonuses were being given because of company concern that inflation was eroding the salaries of its employees. He said Mobil felt the lump-sum bonus would be more useful to employees than a raise. He said the bonus vould go to all 37,000 employees except the company directors. Mobil is also negotiating with the OCAW about distribution to union employees.

Asked if the bonuses were being given to reduce the size of upcoming second-quarter prolits. a Mobil spokesman said: "Definitely not.

A Continental Oil spokesman said its 6 percent increase for its 13,000 white-collar employees was strictly to meet the cost of living and had nothing to do with higher carnings or an attempt to soften second-quarter profits. It has not raised union

Phillips also gave a 6 percent raise to all nonunion employees. calling it "compensation for the depressed period during the wageprice freeze and to offset inflation." It made no mention of increased carnings as being a

End of 'Foreign Aid'

America's future role in the world would be better served if the phrase "foreign aid" could be dispensed with. Outmoded in its origins and implications, the notion thus expressed gives a misleading impression.

When Secretary of State Kissinger went to Capitol Hill this week to argue for the administration's foreign aid package, he was greeted with personal respect and political skepticism. It is because of habit and traditional legislative organization that the programs under discussion are lumped together under one heading—and an unpopular and easy-to-knock heading at that. The only responsible way of passing judgment on this relatively small slice of the national budget is to break it open and measure each of its various components on its own merits.

That India has diverted some of its precious resources into nuclear development may dismay many in this country: but this is no excuse for ignoring the legitimate agricultural and monetary needs of the Indian government. Oil-producing states may be on the verge of sudden riches; but this does not negate the U.S. interest in helping to channel the economic growth of other developing countries along the most effective and humane lines. There may be honest hesitation when Mr. Kissinger invokes a "moral obligation" to assist the government of South Vietnam with military supplies as well as economic aid, especially to the extravagant tune of $2.4 billion.

But dissatisfaction with any specific aid projects cannot undermine the fundamental principle that a share of America's wealth can be employed to strengthen the international economic and political order. The independent Overseas Development Council, which is doing some of the most sophisticated analyses of world economic relations, points out that "countries are more likely to cooperate with the international systems upon which we depend if they are achieving their development goals than if they are failing to do so." Furthermore, the process of orderly economic development will alieviate some of the most troubling problems such as food scarcity, overpopulation and the need for broader markets for world products. And, obviously, there is simply inherent danger in a world of increasing disparity between the rich and the poor. President Nixon argued this week in his address at the Naval Academy that "American power and American resolve" are the essential elements for world peace. He could well have added the element of American understanding of the difference between charity and investment for mutual benefit.

They Had a Little List

Another part of the clanking, rusty machinery of the post-war "anti-subversive" drive was consigned to the junk heap the other day; at the recommendation of Attorney General William Saxbe. President Nixon-by executive order-did away with the notorious "Attorney General's List." Since people of a certain-tender-age will probably regard that news as being about as topical as a dispatch from the Punic wars. a little elaboration might be in order. For some people will never forget the ordeal of which the promulgation of that list was but a part. Unlike the "enemies list" of which we have all heard so much lately, the execntive order authorizing the Attorney General's List was official public and far-reaching in the damage it threatened to individuals, organizations and-needless to saythe Constitution itself. Basically it comprised a grant of authority to the attorney general to designate certain groups and organizations as "subversive;" and membership, past or present, in such a group was used as a measure of a person's fitness for security clearance and government employment. It was, of course, also used as a weapon of smear against individuals. It had features of a bill of attainder.

Like so much of the other "security" apparatus of the period, including much of the misbegotten legislation, the order authorizing the attorney general to compile such a list ran into trouble with the Supreme Court. The court held that organizations could not be listed by the attorney general without benefit of due process-of a hearing. And-as it was with subsequent legislation intended to compel certain groups to register as "Commist-front," "Communistaction" and so on-the legal effort to make this unworkable and constitutionally offensive system function proved too tiresome in the end for the enforcers.

It has been almost 20 years since any new groups were added to the list. Most of those that originally graced it have long been defunct. Some were removed as a consequence of lawsuits. A few years ago, President Nixon made a pass at reviving the list and putting it in a contemporary context by transferring it to the jurisdiction of the Subversive Activities Control Board. But that didn't go anywhere: The board, at least as obnoxious an heirloom as the list. has since gone out of business itself.

No one should think these developments mark the dawn of a new day in which our civil liberties may be taken for granted. Events and revelations of the past few years have demonstrated for all who care to see that government is ever capable of devising new and different means for encroaching on the rights of individuals. But the unmourned passing of the postwar laws and regulations that did such violence to the nation's protected freedoms, does (like the Watergate experience) say much that is reassuring about the regenerative powers of the American people's good sense and the vitality of the Constitution.

A Test for Sen. Jackson

Soviet Jewish emigration to Israel ran at 3.900 a month in 1973, 2.400 in 1974, 1.550 in February, 1,720 in March, 1,600 in April and 1.226 in May, the lowest figure in almost three years. The decline is hard and cruel evidence that the Soviet government will not be pushed past a certain point by Sen. Henry Jackson, who leads a powerful drive in the Senate to prevent President Nixon from exbanding or even maintaining trade with Russia until the Russians allow free Jewish emigration. The figures say that the Russtans are prepared to be just as tough as the senator. If he is going to slow trade, they are going to slow emigration. Mr. Jackson could earlier take deserved credit for mustering the political pressure to keep Jewish emigration flowing. But the pressure

More than the rate of emigration and the scale of trade is at stake. The United States and Russia are at a pivot in their whole mutual effort to moderate and regularize our relations in a new pattern. The squeeze on trade embodied in the Jackson amendment, and the comparable Soviet squeeze on emigration, indicate that on both sides the political constituencies supporting détente are on the defensive. If this hurdle is not lowered by mutual compromise, the momentum of the Nixon policy may flag and Americans and Russians may slip back into the limited fits and starts of earlier years. The ring of détente does not come around every spring.

President Nixon was entirely right to draw our attention to this larger framework in his remarks on the Jackson amendment on Wednesday. "Not by our choice but by our capacity, our primary concern in foreign policy must be to help influence the international conduct of nations in the world arena," he said. "We would not welcome the intervention of other countries in our domestic affairs, and we cannot expect them to be cooperative when we seek to intervene directly in theirs." Of course the President has his forthcoming summit in Moscow in mind: he would be derelict if he did not. He does not wish to sit down in the Kremlin with his hands trussed by the Senate. But he has broader responsibilities in mind, too.

The time for compromise on the Jackson amendment is now. In the 20 months of this measure's life, we have had a full opportunity to see its possibilities and its limits. Earlier the amendment put muscle into the administration's exercise of "quiet diplomacy" to help Jewish emigration but now it puts muscle into the stance of Soviet hardliners.

Sen. Jackson has shown himself to be in this matter a man of great humanity as well as a political manager and legislative operator of rare skills. It is hard to recall another occasion when a single senator played such a sure and ample role in the shaping of an important aspect of the nation's foreign policy. But the essence of leadership is to temper resolve with restraint and thereby to arrive at a sense of what is possible. in the immediate political context and in the broader international context. That is the test before Mr Jackson nov-

The New European Leaders

By James Reston

JEW YORK—In his latest press conference, Secretary of State Kissinger took a somewhat more optimistic line about the future relations between the United States and Europe, and said that President Nixon was planning to meet soon with the new leaders of Britain, France and West Germany.

This could be an important event, for the Europeans with Giscard in Paris, Helmut Schmidt in Bonn and Harold Wilson in London are now reappraising their relations with one another and with the United States, Accordingly this could be one of those moments in history when new men have a chance, perhaps a fleeting chance, to break away from what Kissinger called the legalistic and negative arguments of the past.

A good place to start this reappraisal might be with the official but still private reports of Kissinger's own conversations with the former leaders of Britain, Prance and West Germany over the last two years. This could do much to cut away the thicket of illusion and misunderstanding that poisoned transatlantic policy during the administration of Prime Minister Heath, President Pompidou and Chancellor Brandt.

Washington View

These official reports, at least as seen from Washington, do not support West Europe's suspicions of U.S. policy. They do not sustain the charges that the United States was trying to dominate Europe, or impede the unity of Europe, or make a deal with the Soviet Union at Europe's expense.

Nor do they support former French Foreign Minister Michel Jobert's assertions that Kissinger was saying one thing to the Germans or the British and another thing to the French, or that he was trying to destroy Europe's independent nuclear power.

Obviously, there were differences of opinion and policy between Kissinger and Jobert, and conflicting interests of national politics, and many ambiguities of language, but still it would be interesting if the new leaders were to exchange their diplomatic correspondence on these past con-versations, and review the record in its entirety. It is true that the United States did not consult Europe before

Truly the grievances of that acting independently on some issues that affected Europe's vital interests, and that the Europeans likewise acted independently without consulting Washington on questions important to the United States, but the record shows that Kissinger tried repeatedly to remove these mutual suspicions.

Still Stand

Meanwhile, the two public U.S. proposals to Europe still stand: to work out a "partnership" with Europe—as suggested in his speeches at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York and before the Pilgrim Society in London-and his offer of a common policy to deal with the "energy crisis" and the joint development of nuclear power and other alternate sources

Maybe this view from Washington is wrong or out of focus, but whenever Washington gets in trouble—as it is now—it tends to go back to its ideals, and to reach out for compromise, peace and concord in the world. Read Lincoln, Wilson and Roosevelt in their times of despair, and the point is clear.

Fortunately, by the accidents of history and politics, these rising new leaders of the middle generation—especially Kissinger, Giscard and Schmidt—have a great deal in common and may very well be able to build upon the close and trustful relationships of Giscard and Schmidt.

None of these men could have imagined five years ago that he would now be in a position to deal with the great issues of world politics, let alone to preside over the common problems of the civilization of the West at such a moment of political, monetary and military confusion and op-

But there they are, all preoccupied with inflation and other savage political and economic problems at home, but still faced with rare opportunities to give new directions to the politics of the world.

So far they have not had a chance to get together. Kissinger has been in the Middle East for a month and will be preoccupied with President Nixon's trips to the Arab countries, Israel and the Soviet Union for the rest of June.

But later in the summer, the great question of the future of America, Europe and Japan will come to the fore. For these new leaders have already learned that they cannot solve their problems of inflation, trade, money or security separately, or protect themselve, from the rising poverty and hunger of the majority of the human race.

This is now the challenge before the new leaders, and if they can remove the suspicions of the Gaullist era, a Nizon-Wilson-Giscard-Schmidt summit meeting might revive hope for a new transatlantic alliance.

Stonewalling Hurts

The Grand Jury's Vo

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — By agreeing to surrender the additional tape recordings subpoenaed by Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, President Nizon could have kept secret the terribly damaging information that a federal grand jury wanted to brand him a Watergate conspirator,

What's more, the President was fully aware that his giving up the tapes might have kept the grand jury action secret until after House impeachment proceedings were completed.

Thus, the fact that Mr. Nixon, instead, adopted the stonewall strategy in refusing all additional tapes seems still more inexplicable and self-destructive. It suggests that either the additional tapes are too incriminating to surrender or that the White House legal defense is based on a woodenheaded stubbornness.

On Sunday, May 5, Jaworski informed Nixon defense lawyer James St. Clair what had been widely rumored but never firmly pinned down: The grand jury early this year voted unanimously to list Mr. Nixon as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate cover-up but had been dissuaded by Jaworski from actually taking

Tape Negotiations

On that Sunday, Jaworski and

St. Clair were negotiating over tapes of 64 additional Watergate-related conversations with high hopes by the prosecution that the White House would cooperate.
If Jaworski did not have to press his subpoena in court, there would be no immediate need to list all unindicted co-conspirators or reveal the grand jury vote on Mr. Nixon. Such information need not be given to defense lawyers for Watergate cover-up defendants until just before their trials begin many months from now. By that time, House impeachment proceedings would probably be concluded. Purthermore, there was a chance that the informa-

How does Anthony Lewis look in that respect? Not so good, I would say. It is enough to read him now and then. Let me refer you for example to his "Unbearable Reality" (IHT May 31). We know that he hates Nixon, Okay! So he blames everything that is wrong in the world of today (and there is plenty of it; on Richard Nixou. For once study the history. Mr. Lewis. check events, know facts. The "odium" inherFDR," to Tehran, to Yalta, then to H. Truman's doings (Postdam). This is when 99.9 percent of today's mess began. You talk, Mr. Lewis, about international wrongdoings, injustice, misery, enslavement, torture, lawlessness and whatnot! Look back, Mr. Lewis! The United States, a great power, stayed away from world problems between 1920-1940. It did not get involved again till the end of 1941. The American contribution toward the defeat of Germany, Japan and Italy was most important and decisive. But, in terms of foreign policy, the victory on battlefields became a disaster. This is when injustice, enslavement, torture, lawle misery, etc., not only had been accepted but were sanctioned and practically encouraged. The world owes this to POR and the next in line-Harry Truman. Ike, Kennedy, LBJ inherited a mess. They did not know how to deal with it LBJ at least tried but he did not follow through Nixon did much better than his predecessors. In many ways his achievements in foreign politics are outstanding and remarkable. Let us be objective, Mr. Lewis. JAN W. LEDNICKI.

Alvin Shuster wrote (IHT, June 4) that "sithough they were conquered by England several centuries ago, Scotland and Wales have maintained a strong sense of national identity." Scotland was never cononered by England, nor vice versa. In 1603 King James VI of Scotland inherited the English throne (becoming King James I of England) and creating one "Unit-ed Kingdom." In 1707 the Scottish and English Parliaments voted separately to unite, so that the two nations joined to form one state while retaining their distinct national identities and

Chile Is Said To Bar Visits By Red Cross

Junta Puts Restrictions On Prisons and Camps

By Joseph Novitski

SANTIAGO, June 7 (WP).-The military government has kept an International Red Cross mission from inspecting Chile's jails and detention camps since April 30, informed sources reported Tuesday.

The mission of 14 Swiss had visited jalls and detention centers regularly to observe the treatment of prisoners since last September. When a military coup ousted President Salvador Allende's Socialist government. On April 30 a government authoriza-tion for the Red Gross prison visits expired. It has not been renewed. sources close to the mission said.

Inspection visits to the detention centers, set up to hold the tens of thousands of Chileans who have been detained at one time or another since the coup, have been the main work of the Red Cross mission. It has recularly communicated its findings to the government, but those findings have never been made

But diplomats in Santiago report that the junta has apparentreacted to pressure from the Red Cross, Recently, an official said that a Red Cross report had induced the government to transfer 34 former officials from an island camp in the Strait of Magellan to four military instal-lations near Santiago.

Dawson Island

Dawson Island, where former abinet ministers and ranking political officials were held from Sentember until last month, is one of three known camps established by the government. The two others, called Chacabuco and Pisagua, are on the edges of the Atacama Desert in northern Chile. Two weeks ago there were about 700 men awaiting trial or interrogation at Chacabuco and somewhat more than 400 persons confined at Pisagua. The most recent official estimate revealed that more than 5,000 Chilcans were still detained without charges at these camps, as well as in jails and improvised deten-tion centers.

Members of the Red Cross mission have visited all the known detention centers, provided some financial help to the families of detained men and observed the military trials of former sup-porters of President Allende. Yesterday the mission announced a donation of 1.500 tons of powder-ed milk to Chilean government health authorities. milk is needed for feeding babies through the Soutbern Hemisphere winter that has been in Chile. It is expensive and in short supthe war in Europe ended in May, ply-

In April, Santiago's censored newspapers reported that Red planning this trip for several Cross men who visited the prisoners then on Dawson Island had was their first visit to the United States. taken forbidden messages off the island for some prisoners and smuggled in weapons that were described only as "sharp instruments.'

The mission was vielcomed at first by the junta but relations cooled over the months as its reports began to flow to the got-

U.S. Army Tops Its Enlistment Goal for Month

WASHINTON, June 7 (AP: .-The volunteer Army topped its enlistment objective last month for the first time this year.

Citing this and other indicators. Pentagon officials now predict that the Army will reach or come close to its target of 781.600 men by June 30, the end of the first full year since the draft ian expired.

Last winter they were predicting that the Army probably would tall about 20,000 men short. Figures just compiled show that the Army enlisted 14 848 men and women last month, which was 103.9 percent of its objective Army officials, some of whom have doubted the all-volunteer concept in the past, credited the improvement principally to better recruiting. Another key factor in the Army's brightened prospects, they said, is a sharp upturn in reenlishments. Inflation Factor

The cost of the U.S. shuttle project is being held to an estimated $5.2 billion, reckoned in 1971 dollars. Subsequent inflation has pushed the estimates to $5.7

If costs remain as low as expected, and at least 440 shuttle flights are made in the 1980-1991 period, the U.S. space agency calculates, the cost of each flight can be held below $10.5 million, again reckoned in 1971 dollars.

The predictions of possible numbers of shuttle flights during the 1980s were detailed by Philip Culbertson, director of mission and payload integration.

John Yardley, the the new administrator of NASA for manned space flight, said the lists of possible shuttle missions are "cold, hard things that need to be done, not wild-eyed dreams."

A large stuffed mountain goat, with curied horns whose pattern the Kirghiz women have woven into their carpets for centuries, stands guard over the stairway at the Ala-Too Hotel. Horses appear in metal bas-reliefs in the dining room. The legendary Kirghiz hero, Manas, had a famous white steed, Ak-Kula, and animal breeders today boast of the sure-footed swiftness of the Kirghiz horses.

But sheep are the backbone of the economy, with some herders tending state-owned herds and others working with private herds. The latter account for one mil-

"That's a private herd," said a Kirghiz journalist accompanying foreign newsmen. He pointed uphili to a flock of 100 to 200. "How can you tell?" one of the foreigners inquired. "Because the flock has many black sheep," was the sure reply, "In our republic, the state and collective farms raise white sheep. Only the private herders raise black sheep,"

The Russian way of life, brought by the colonial trust of the Russian cears into what was called Turkestan in the last century, has had deep impact on the main cities. With the intermingling of Russians, Uzbeks, Tadzhiks, Kirghiz and others is slowly growing.

But, a pretty brown-eyed Kirghiz girl said that when a Russian and a Kirghiz marry, they usually have two weddings one in secular. Somet style, and the other in traditional, Islamic style. In their homes, one room may be done in typical Russian style and the other in Kurghir fashion with a low table on the floor. surrounded by skins, walls decorated with bright carpets, tea served in little bowls rather than cups, and great mounds of greens and rice pilaff eaten by hand.

Anton Bruckner-The Man, the Music

By David Stevens

VIENNA, June 7 (IRT).-Not only is almost all the music of Anton Bruckner being heard here to mark the 150th anniversary of his birth but the Na-tionalbibliothek has mounted an exhibition that both looks back on his life and work while also trying to look forward to a new evaluation of his enigmatic personality.

There are few composers whose personal lives give so few clues to their music. Bruckner, the son of a country teacher living near Ling had outwardly a life almost devoid of events, and the usual picture is of a naive, peasant-like man deeply and neurotically) religious, socially inept, and observiously modest. Yet, after a rigorous training in all aspects of his art that did not end until he was almost 40, he began to write and incessantly revise his series of complex and elaborately constructed symphonies.

The catalogue that goes with this exhibition—mounted by the director of the library's music collection Franz Grasberger—sug-gests that Bruckner's music was

Entertainment In New York

NEW YORK, June 7 (IHT).-This is how critics for The New York Times rate new films and stage productions:

Films

"That's Entertainment." written and directed by Jack Haley jr., is a tour of MGM musicals from 1929 to 1958. "When Graham Greene was a movie critic in the 1930s," Nora Sayre points out, "he detested close-ups of the open mouths of singers; his reviews complained steadily of teeth and tonsils. He would be miserable at That's Entertainment." But Sayre goes on to say that those who don't share Graham's phobia will hugely enjoy this movie. The pleasures are abundant."

Plays

"The Magic Show," a musical, features Doug Henning, a ma-gician, "Mr. Henning is terrific," says Clive Barnes. "He is the greatest illusionist I have ever seen . . on the other hand, the show is awful." While Mr. Henshow is swith, while left, Heining, "a 27-year-old, with straggly mustache and a tendency to jeans," is not your typical magician, his act is brilliant, says Barnes. But in spite of his skill to a skeleton, thrusting a sword Alice, Todd Davis, Michele Shay through a man's body and chang- and Charles Weldon, ing a live dove into a live rabbit, Barnes says "The Magic Show" is feeble. It has a story by Bob Randall about a seedy little nightclub in Passaic, N.J. The nightclub has two seedy untalented singers and one seedy untalented conjuror who has a taste for the bottle . . When the conjuror hits the champagne once too often, the manager gets Mr. Henning from a talent agency." Barnes praises Grover Dale's staging and the performances of Anita Morris, Dale Soules and David Ogden Stiers, but he found Stephen Schwartz's songs "all sounded much alike." The show is at the Cort Theater.

"In the Deepest Part of Sleep," by Charles Fuller, at St. Marks Playhouse, is the Negro Ensemble Company's last offering for the season. The play is about the debilitating effect of a mentally disturbed mother on a Philadel-phia family in the mid-1950s. Mel Gussow says that while the experience may be "irue" as seen through the eyes of a young black adolescent, "it does not hold much interest as theater."
Fuller, author of "Candidate!" has a "tendency to overdraw his characters and his situations," the critic says. Director Israel Hicks seems to encourage that impulse. In the cast are Mary handwriting by an expert (who is also a psychologist) who did not know who the subject was, had some unexpected but not unbelievable things to say, beginning: "An extremely gifted, but very difficult individualist and emotional egoist . ." and ended, "so he never found what he sought, he lived in his own world which he sought to fill out with gifts of genius."

In the realm of fact, the exhibi tion also helps to put the cliché of Bruckner-the-naive in the shade by pointing out that he was well-traveled, a successful organ virtuoso and a professor at the University of Vienna.

Meanwhile, in the Musikverein, the anniversary performances of the music have been continuing at a high level. The Concertgebouw Orchestra under Bernard Haitink — Bruckner specialists whose recordings of all the symphonies, from "zero" to nine, is another noteworthy anniversary event—came to Vienna for two concerts that included the Fifth Symphony. Haitink's way with Bruckner is right down the middle, he neither hurrles nor dawdles nor sentimentalizes, and the orchestra was in rich and precise form for this contrapuntally complex work. Carlo Maria Giulini, with the Vienna Symphony, brought great intensity and forward-pressing lyricism to the Second Symphony, rousing the audience to a frenzy but leaving some Viennese cool to what they considered an Italianate approach. Milan Horvat and the Austrian Radio Orchestra gave energetic performances of the early G-minor Overture and, with the Radio Chorus, of Psalm

The festival also has included two pianistic events of note. Maurizio Pollini, in a recital that included Schubert's A-minor Sonata and "Wanderer Fantasy" and Chopin's 24 preludes (Opus 28), then in the Schumann concerto with Giulini, confirmed his credentials as one of today's keyboard giants. Intelligence and feeling were in constant balance, and tone and technique unfailing ing to spend a dirty weekend with his unmarried sister-in-law An-nie (Felicity Kendal) but is thwarted by his other sister-in-law Sarah (Renelope Kelth), and in these performances,

Withelm Kempff, at 79, has embarked on the great voyage through the Beethoven sonatas, which he is playing in statutory order. With an artist of his experlence, it is bound to be an interesting trip, and the Brahms Hall in the Musikverein is sold out all the way. The first night took the veteran planist through the first four sonatas, and while there were many beauties—notably the slow movements of Opus 2, No. 3, and Opus 7-there were also times when Kempif's fingers simply could not keep the pace he

PARIS, June 7 (IRT),-The I "Women on Women" film festival is packing the American Cultural Center in Paris, drawing women writers, artists and film-makers, French and foreign, among them Simone de Beauvoit Agnès Varda, Ruth Franken and Nathalie Sarraute. At the festival's conclusion will be a televised round-table discussion with leading literary figures participating.

The festival was organized by Esta Marshall, a documentary film-maker whose recent "Psy-chology of Photography" series has been shown on German television. The festival program consists of films about American women by women directors. While not all of the directors are Americans, all of the films were shot in the United States. The range extends from animated cartoons to the experimental, from television material and features to the underground. The program continues through Wednesday the center will be closed Sunday; and many of the interesting selections are being repeated during the next few days.

of cartoons will be shown from 1 to 3 p.m.—youngsters are wel-come. Among these offerings are Sally Cruickshank's "Chow Fun" and "Fun on Mars" and Susan Pitt Kraning's "Jelferson Circus Songs," a journey into the domain of the dreams of children under 10. In the evening (9 p.m.) will be a screening of "Gertrude Stein: When This You See, Re-member Me," a three-part television special with footage of Miss Stein, her Paris home, her art collection, her 1934 visit to her homeland, together with interviews with Alice B. Toklas: Janet Flanner of The New Yorker; Jennie Bradley, the celebrated literary agent of Joyce, Projet and Courad; Virgil Thompson, Thornton Wilder and other of Gertrude Stein's friends and contemporaries.

Although Olivier Hussenot is eloquent in the main role, the play itself is a tiny, enigmatic fable about an old man's return to the village of his youth inhabited solely by women, widows and their servants. But it has a strange and magical power due to the use of huge puppets that play the part of the widows: they are 8-feettall dolls, nothing more than black robes surmounted mournful, black-eyed faces of an Easter Island impassivity. They are carried and manipulated quite openly by actors. Yet, somehow they not only take on a half life of their own, an cerie supernatural quality, but a relationship develops between them and their manipulators that lifts the entertainment out of the ordinary. Another truly superb ax, its interest enhanced by a very good pating, also arous-ed little interest—406 francs was the price. This ax could be dated to around the 4th century BCin the mid-Celtic period-and would have been a handsome addition to any museum collec-

Two Spearheads

Next was in my opinion the best work in the sale, another spearhead of beautiful shape with a deep bluish green patina and the smooth feel that cast bronze from that period sometimes has. This was a real rarity -not because of the shape, a well-known type--but because of the marvelous state of preservation. This spearhead had the aesthetic appeal of pure abstract shapes. The price was 986 francs. Something of an anticlimax were three ribbed bracelets which came up next. Their patina bad, both grainy and dull, Even so, 250 francs was a low price to pay for 4th-century BC bracelets.

Unfamiliar To understand the significance of these low prices, one must re-member that this was the first auction of the season including Celtic items excavated in France, The expert, Charles Ratton, who has been in the field for some 40 years—and is incidentally known the world over as probably the finest connoisseur of African and South Seas art—says that he hasn't sold any Celtic art "for

A rare bronze from the late Tcheou period troughly equivalent to the Celtic period in France), even if small, would go well over the 1,000-franc mark. It isn't just a question of aesthetics-it's a question of lamiliarity and chic.

One Celtic bronze that sold for a "high" price-2,350 franca -was a small statue, identified by Ratton as a standing figure of the god Dionysios. It belonged according to Ratton's catalogue notes, to the Roman period is France. The bronze looked in miliar with its "Roman" style Ratton's presale estimate for th piece was 3,460 francs-so th final price was more than 1.00 francs under the estimate. June_ Gillespie's reality is extraordinary, the more he deals with the ordinary. The kitchens, porches, empty lots, catered family parties and street events of northwestern Massachusetts become cool hallucinatory images under his brush. Inanimate surfaces are worked over with such intensity that they turn animate. While human flesh is hard and polished, wooden slats open their acars, stones sweat, sinister decomposition occes from shadows. It is as if Gillespie tried to out-tare the phenomena of the world before him, with pugnaciousness and with wonder, like an innocent who refuses to be frightened by the mexplicable. Instead of painting splendor in which hirks decay, he attacks decay in search of splendor. He is posses by a passion for the materiality things. U.S. Imposes Duty on Italian Die Presses

WASHINGTON, June 7 (AP-DJ).-The Treasury Department announced today that it will impose countervailing duties on imports of die presses from Italy to offset export subsidies paid by the Italian government.

The action will take effect about July 10. The Treasury said the formal notice will be published next Monday.

Treasury officials said that this is the seventh time the countervalling duty law has been invoked against imports on steel products from Italy, because Italy continues to subsidize such exports.

U.S. penalty duties were imposed earlier on steel transmission towers, refrigerators, compressors and other items. U.S. imports of die presses from Italy totaled about $300,000 in the period from October 1972 through April 1973, officials said.

Controls Feared

Big business, however, is unhappy about the prospect of monetary controls. Virtually all major concerns, state and private, have international finance and holding companies in Switzerland, Liechtenstein, Luxembourg, Bermuda and other countries through which they channel funds to their overseas subsidia-

In addition to resisting curbs on such activities, they fear re-taliation by other countries. An Arab banker in Rome said in an interview yesterday that the oil-producing countries, Arab and non-Arab, absolutely refuse to invest in Italy because of fears

For the first four months of the year, Italy's trade deficit was 2.7 trillion lire, almost three times the gap of 920 billion lire in the same period in 1973.

Carli's answer-higher taxes and tighter credit, coupled with monetary curbs—is expected to prove unpopular with the unions. Pan Am, TWA Talks Collapse

Pan American World Airways and Trans World Airlines have announced the collapse of government-approved talks on consolidation of some or all their transatlantic services. The airlines, the nation's two largest international operators. had requested and obtained the Civil Aeronautics Board's permission to hold the talks to help offset skyrocketing fuel prices. The permission was needed because of anti-trust laws. Still pending before the board are requests by each carrier for subridy payments to offset fuel costs and bills have been introduced in the House to provide payments to make up for fuel price in-cresses. Chances that direct subsidy would come either from the board or from Congress are considered by most qualified observers to be very

Matsushita Cuts TV Production

Maisushita Electric Industrial Co. has been curtailing color television production operations by 10 to 15 percent since last month. Matsushita says this is due mainly to a slowdown in domestic sales stemming from the government's demand that management take measures to curb price spirals and credit pressure. Matsushita adds, however, that color TV sales began showing signs of recovering slowly earlier this

Alaska Line Capacity May Double

British Petroleum Ltd. says the partners in Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the company which will build and operate the trans-Alaska pipeline, are considering doubling initial capacity of the ime to 1.2 million barrels a day. To provide this capacity, it is currently estimated, will cost more than 54 billion, BP says. The move to speed up the development of the pipeline's capacity stems from the U.S. energy shortage and the need to make the most economic use of the line. BP adds. As a result of the move, BP says it and its U.S. associate, Sohio, empect to increase their share in Alveska to about 50 percent. At present Sohio holds 28 percent. Under the new arrangements, its stake is expected to rise to 34 percent while BP would take about a 16 per-

N.Y. Stock Prices Rise On Citibank Rate Move

NEW YORK, June 7 (Reuters). -The reduction in the prime interest rate below 11 1 2 percent by a major bank sent jubilant invectors rushing to buy stocks today at the fastest pace in nearly three months.

Popular market averages posted strong gains on the New York Stock Exchange although sporadic profit-taking trimmed part of the advance. The cheering began at the opening bell, when First National City Bank the nation's secondlargest, announced it was reducing its prime rate. Although there was no immediate follow-through by other major banks on Citibank's cut, they were expected to fall into line with the 11 1/4 percent prime by next week. The Dow Jones industrial average, which had been up more

Finally, there is the atmosphere of presidential politics in the 1970s, to which the story inevitably addresses itself. It may not he true that the man on whom President Tim Kegan is roughly based made deals with the rich and powerful. It may not be true that America is run by a small. conspiring oligarchy. It may not be true that things happen in the White House at the whim of movie stars and labor leaders, of courterans and generals. But the possibilities are no longer inconceivable. At the very least, Mr. Condon gratifies our paranoia.

In short, "Winter Kills" is grand entertainment. If my only complaint is that I caught on too early what the uitimate outcome "ould be. I can les it pass because there are so many surprismy trists before that outcome is realized. For my money, this is the best book Mr. Condon has "ritten since "The Manchurian Candidate." Early Pace

Covered Portage may have been entered to help pairol the early pace, a crisical factor to the outcome of any 12-furlong event. It is likely, however, that Little Current's running mate will be acratched—unless one or two of the other speed horses should be withdrawn.

"I was pleased to see Jolly John ship in from Delaware," Rondinello said. "He and Hudson County are the speed. They should help make Little Current's late charge more effective."

Pancho Martin undoubtedly was thinking much like Rondinello when he entered Accipiter. This is a top miler which, like Covered Portage, may be scratched if Jolly John and Hudson County go postward.

El Espanoleta also could come out if the speed stays in, Trainer Laz Barrera believes Bold and Fancy has a chance of winning if the pace is honest. El Espanoleta has been a standout runner in Puerto Rico, while merely a good horse in the United States. Pace has been a critical factor in the 1974 Triple Crown races. The speed held up so well in the Derby that the speedy Hudson County could hang on for second place. But the early leaders, except for Jolly John (fourth), were not prominent at the finish of the Preakness.

The Belmont, billed as "the test of the champion." supposedly stresses bloodlines and stamina. If so, Rondinello and Darby Danowner John Galbreath are sitting pretty. Much of the opposition consists of milers trying a mile and a half, while Little Current has the pedigree of a genuine

"Last time I was nere, I was walking around in a cloud." Gabrielsen said. This time I ve got my fect firmly on the ground and Im much more relaxed."

The American's power and accuracy in his first tournament of the year overwhelmed Poxon. a part-time greenkeeper who had borrowed Gary Player's philosophy of positive thinking to make a big impact.

The decisive moment came at the fifth hole. Poxon had just leveled with a birdie two, then watched the American find a nest of bunkers from the fifth tee. Gabrielsen hij a superb modium-iron recovery and then caressed a delicate chip inches from the hole for a winning birdle Poxon, on in two, three putted and his confidence vanished.

The American won, six and eight, turned three up and then demoralized his opponent by unleashing a colossal four-hole lead at the 11th.

DURBAN, South Africa, June 7 Reuters .- Black South African boxers would be allowed to fight whites in this country only if they were both contenders for a world title, the chairman of the South African Boxing Board of Control said here.

Justice Hendrik Klopper was clarifying remarks made by the minister of sport, Piet Koornhof. who earlier this week said "multinational bouts involving men of different races would now be permitted. But Klopper explained that whites and blacks would not be allowed to compete for South African championships.

Trotter Ego Boy, 7, Is Dead in Sweden

VASTERAS, Sweden, June 7 AP:.—Ego Boy, a 7-year-old legend in Swedish harness racing. has died here from an intestinal disease.

Ego Boy, one of the greatest crowd-pullers in the sport, won the Solvalla Elite Race last year, edging American favorite Flower Child, and set a European trotting record with a kilometer time of 1:13.8. Ego Boy won 50 of 67 starts, and earned more than

10-Cent Beer-the Drink That Made Cleveland Infamous

By Dave Anderson

NEW YORK, June 7 (NYT).-Surely the nation needs a good 5-cent cigar, but baseball doesn't need

When the Cleveland Indians advertised beer for dime Tuesday night. 23.134 customers responded. Since the Indians haven't been worth much more than 10 cents in the 20 years since they last won an American League pennant, the beer obviously was the attraction, not the game. By the rinth inning, the beer had lost its head. So had some consumers. What were described as "hundreds of fans" swarmed onto the field at Municipal Stadium, turning a 5-5 game with the Texas Rangers into a 9-0 loss for the Indians, by Whatever brand it was that the Indians dispensed for a dime, it's now the beer that made Cleveland infamous. But hopefully it will be the beer that alerts the baseball establishment to reinforce its crowd-control measures before a tragedy occurs. Baseball seems to attract the rowdies and the vandals. Once the grass of a major league ballpark was a sacred preserve. But the TV cameras influenced teenagers to run on the field, hoping they'd be seen. Even though TV no longer focuses on the showoffs, the fad has persisted, and in

Somehow baseball players appear harmless to

Too Intimidating In basketball, the players are too tail, too intunidating. In hockey, the players are surrounded by protective glass. They're also carrying sticks. Boxing attracts rowdies, but they don't storm the Baseball occasionally has a problem after a game ends, as it did at Shea Stadium last year when the New York Mets eliminated the Cincinnati Reds in the National League playoff. But most baseball episodes occur during games. Not long ago, Bob Watson of the Houston Astros, dared and bleeding after running into the leftfield fence at Cincinnati, had beer poured on him by

"When the cops tried to get one guy out of there." Pete Rose recalled today, "he was so drunk, they couldn't even move him. His body just kept sagging." Pete Rose is the resident expert on baseball rowdies from coast to coast, mostly because he has been the resident target. Following a brawl at second base with Bud Harrelson of the New York Mets in the playoffs last year, he had a few bottles thrown at him from Shea's loftfield stands. Early this season, he was vilified in Los Angeles, San Francisco and San Diego, apparently because of the Harrelson episode.

"They threw a couple of bottles in Los Angeles. some ice in San Diego and in San Francisco the stands are far back, but I heard a couple of bottles break on the ground between. But the language in Los Angeles was unbelievable. I don't mean the usual things. I mean an obscene chant in leftfield that could be heard in our dugout behind first base. And one guy was saying terrible things about my mother. That's not baseball."

Rose mentioned the psychology of a ballpark, which seems to liberate the emotions of some Speciators.

"It's a lot easier to go to the ballpark and yell those things." the Cincinnati leftfielder said. "But the owners have to use some common sense. Like in Philadelphia last year, they gave away golf balls one night. By the end of the game, some people were throwing them. You get hit with a golf ball, you can get killed. Another time in Philadelphia somebody was throwing little flashlight batteries. The umpire at first base had to put on a batting helmet."

Rose mentioned a recent Indians-Rangers beanball incident as a factor in the Tuesday night

"But selling beer for 10 cents ain't too smart either," he said. "If a guy was smart, he'd stay outside the gate and sell aspirin for a nickel less. But the big thing is, the penalties aren't stiff enough for people. They know that even if they run on the field, nothing is going to happen. And the owners will wait until some player gets hurt or some fan gets hurt."

The owners keep talking about more security. But the extra security never materializes until aiter an incident.

The primary problem is that ballpark security policemen don't do their job. Not because they don't want to, but because they're intimidated by the thought of becoming involved in a possible court case. It's easier for them to let people run wild or to let them yell anything they want than it is to stop them. The atmosphere has to be changed. And banning 10-cent beer won't do it.

There was more applause. "The movie rights for Water-gate are going very briskly. Robert Redford is working on 'All the President's Men,' and several other movie producers are ready-ing projects, including 'Gidget Goes to the Watergate,' Last Tango at the White House.' The Tapes of Wrath.' Lassie at the Supreme Court." The Life of Bebe Rebozo' and 'Confessions of a Jesuit Priest.

"Watergate Industries has bought four movie studios, and we now have a record division, where we intend to produce the hit expletives from the transcripts."

Springhinder continued: "We also plan to go into TV in a big way if the impeachment trial takes place. We will produce 'Monday Night at the Senate' with Howard Cosell and Frank Gifford. "Watergate Industries is happy to announce it is going into the employment - a g e n c y business, since it is estimated that there v.ill be 345.890 White House aides looking for jobs in the next 12 months.

"Our congressional subopena printing plant is now working 24 hours a day, and we just received a multimillion-dollar contract from the House Judiciary Committee which should keep us busy for two more years." Springbinder got a standing ovation. "Are there any questions?" he asked, "Why aren't there more women involved with Watergate?" a militant stockholder shouted from the floor.

Springbinder answered nervously. "It's true that Watergate was strictly a white, male affair, with very few exceptions. We tried to find women who could become involved, but there just weren't any who were qualified. Women don't seem to be physiologically or mentally able to cope with all it takes to be part of a Water-gate scandal"

The French Take to Provinces

PARIS (IHT).—It may be a genuine return to the earth, it may be the French conviction that real estate is the only safe investment. At any rate, more and more city folk are interested in the provinces they used to scorn.

One of the side effects has been a surge of interest in local French tradition and folklore. an interest that will take definite form next week at the first Salon Français du Livre Regional, to be held June 14-16 in Anjou, 300 kilometers south-

The book fair, under the leadership of Daniel Couturier, a young Angevin by adoption, will include publishers big and small, writers, secondhand book dealers, printers, artists, anyone interested in his or her region. "We've already received a mountain of books from all over France," said Mr. Couturier on a quick trip to Paris to distribute posters for the fair which were designed by the man who does menus for the liner France.

Would-be exhibitors pay a amall, sum in return for which they get a table. "They can put whatever they want on Two years ago he wrote a hand-somely illustrated pamphlet on their tables. That's what's fun, letting people be free!"

Mr. Couturier, who seems to end each phrase with an enthusiastic exclamation point, looks like a bearded medieval chevalier despite his managerial blue blazer, gray flannels and superbly organized briefcase He also wears astounding yaller shoes. He sells shoes four months a year in Germany and Switzerland, then retires to his 15th-century house in Longue, near Saumur,

"My daughter plays the plane and I play the violin," he says.

"He's the daires,

Strictly speaking, a weathervane indicates the direction of the wind. Although they probably existed in Roman times, early French examples date from the Middle Ages. They can be found in antique stores, but good ones, says Mr. Couturier, are rare because no owner will sell one until it falls from its perch.

According to Mr. Couturier. weathervanes were first-awarded, rather like medals, to soldiers who led an assault and were the first to plant their pennants an enemy ramparts. They remained a privilege until the Revolution decreed that everyone could have one. Before that, in the 17th century, says Mr. Couturier, there were memorable trials of people who had usurped the privilege.

The weathervanes in his part of the country that Mr. Couturier loves were made by locals often to indicate their professions—a sailor at the heim, a miller at his wheel, a farmer at his plow, a bustling roman running errands under an umbrella.

One of the finest weathervanes of the area was made by an old man, Père Houot, a stranger who came to Anjou all the way from the Vosges in eastern France and made a weathervane showing the pine forests of his birthplace, the jolly companions of his youth, and a shepherd brooding over a fire and gazing, perhaps toward Anjou and the future. Because he fears that the detail might be lost if the weathervane were put on his roof, Pere Houot has fixed it over his door.

As soon as Mr. Couturier's modest little booklet came out. tourists appeared to inspect local weathervanes and to ask probing questions. Poor Père Houot had to write a quick note to Mr. Couturier, begging for a quick lesson in weathervane history and technique ao he wouldn't be caught short. The success of the booklet, now out of print, would seem to confirm Mr. Couturier's view that there is more interest in regional literature than people suspect. There is even profit in it, though not neces-sarily for the author. Mr. Couturier sold his weathervane booklet for 30 francs in 1972 and the other day saw it listed in a second-hand dealer's catalogue for 70 francs, a tidy markup. As we say, even without weathervanes, it's an ill

This photo was used to illustrate a recent column by John Snell poking fun at beauty contests. Mrs. Cheap, now a high school teacher in Snohomish, Wash, said through her attorney that the article was libelous, slanderous and made her the subject of ridicule among her students. She threatened a $1,000 libel suit unless the Daily agree to turn over the responsible person to be hit with a custard pie. So on Wed-nesday afternoon, Snell Mc-Garry and Mrs. Cheap held a brief ceremony outside the com-munications building. Snell was wearing a bathing suit flippers and a T-shirt emblazoned with the words "Daily Libel Team." "If this makes her feel better," said Snell, "it's cool." . . .

MARRIED: Singer Sly Stone, 30, of Sly and the Family Stone, and Kath Silva, 20, before 21,000 fans Wednesday night in Madison Square Garden, New York The couple has a 9-month-old son, Sylvester. After Bishop B. R. Steward, from the first jurisdiction of the Churches of God and Christ in San Francisco, pronounced them man and wife, Siy. and the Family Stone went on with a scheduled concert, the group's 11th sold-out performance the Garden AWARDED: UNESCO's 1973 International Fair Play Trophies to British foot-baller Bobby Chariton and the British cycling team of Ian Hallam, Willie Moore, Mick Bennett and Rick Evans. The ceremony took place in Paris Friday with UNESCO director-general Rene Mahen making the presentations. Charlton's trophy is for a career described as an example of "fair play, modesty and sporting spir-it." The British cyclists got theirs for their actions during the finals of the world cycling championships in San Sebastian Spain, last year. They refused to accept first place when the leading West German team fell, be-
